capacity building across sectors to pass knowledge on - not only organizational memory, but service provider memory of learnings and findings

faire vivre nos projets plutôt que de toujours devoir développer des nouveaux pour obtenir du nouveau financement

Collaborative approach with academia and community organizations that funders like.

We want to be accountable to our clients. We want to continue certain programs that worked well. It is disappointing to us the service provider and clients when we can no longer provide the service or program

There is a change in practice that stays - people do things differently

Changes are made to standard "content" of services

A change is made in policy or regulations

continued connections with partner outside of the healthcare and settlement world

Would love to see a participant advisory committee or working group that informs important discussions (don't know what this looks like, but making GBV participatory) mental health programming for participants that is more frequant and accessible for newcomer clients especially on topics such as GBV

Would love to have a 1 staff that can focus on advocacy and policy work that we didn't have time for

That virtual care/ hybrid for men who use violence. Organization are already overworked and
